

Gods Gold: Beneath the Shifting Sands of Christian Thought on Profit-Seeking and Wealth

The book traces the historical shift concerning which schools of thought were dominant on how profit-seeking and wealth are related to the sin of greed. The anti-wealth paradigm gave way to the uncoupling of greed from profit-seeking and wealth beginning in the Commercial Revolution and concluding a century before the Protestant Reformation. Setting the influence of the commercializing Europe aside, I look at Christian theology--Christology (i.e., Son of God, or the god-man figure) in particular--and uncover a very subtle pro-wealth bias, I contend that it lies at the core of the theology rather than merely in Christian ethics, and perhaps even in the phenomenon of religion itself. This bias can be viewed as a susceptibility to greed taken in turn as a manifestation of self-idolatry. In fact, the way in which the human mind naturally handles divinity itself runs certain risks, which have hardly been transparent enough for us mere mortals to manage, let alone recognize. We are in this respect perhaps the last to recognize what may be most closely etched in our very nature. This does not mean that Christians must give up a Christocentric approach or that our species had better leave the phenomenon of religion well enough alone. I conclude the book with providing the prudent Christologist and, moreover, religionist with some helpful suggestions on how to minimize the risk of Christology, and religion moreover, being rendered human, all too human, and thus so unwittingly vulnerable to greed and ultimately the underlying impulse to self-idolatry.

Located on a 160 x 25 site near the south entrance of Newburyports Clipper City Rail Trail, the Alchemical Garden is a richly layered evolving art and horticulture experience that is accessible on many different levels to the public. Alchemical Garden Plot plan Alchemical Garden is designed to become a model for a sustainable, interactive public garden through the use of symbiotic, low maintenance plantings and recycled materials. The ancient discipline of Alchemy marries art and science and is famously known for transforming a common material into gold. The Alchemical Garden will lead the community to transform on a number of levels : Alchemical Garden with Spring Wheat "Crop Circles" June, 2011 BUILD COMMUNITY: The Garden creates a gathering space for individuals to form a more intimate relationship with their community. The space is designed with visual features and seating areas to compel passers-by to pause, reflect, and have a multi-sensory interactive experience (sight, smell, touch, taste, smell) with the garden and the community.
